Robert Hargous gave a farewell dinner las Three weeks ago he sent in his resignation to the Commander. It landed like a bomb in headquarters. No action was immediately taken. "We hoped," said Major Perry yesterday, "to convince Coi. Evans of the error of his way." In the rank and file all sorts of stories spread as to the cause of Coi. Evans's resignation. Some said he had "been ordered to farewell," and didn't like it. Ordered to farewell is a way they have in the Salvation Army of saying that an officer has been ordered to another station or outpost. Some said he had a row with the Commander, but the truth probably concerned only his family.

At headquarters yesterday much regret was expressed over Col. Evans's action.
